

Lisa H. Wang

Lisa is a patent attorney with the United States Army where she prepares and prosecutes patent applications directed to propellants, detonators, energetics and projectiles. Lisa also provides counsel on intellectual property matters relating to government procurement contracts, cooperative research and development agreements, licensing, and data rights. Prior to joining the legal department at the Army, Lisa was a partner at Gibbons P.C. practicing in patent litigation, counseling and prosecution in the area of pharmaceuticals and medical devices.

Lisa received her law degree from Rutgers Law School – Newark and her Master's Degree in Cell Molecular Biology from New York University.